Mary's faith never wavered! Because of her past experiences she was very determined, self-reliant, feisty, not very emotional and at times down right mean, but that was her way of coping with things at hand (thus the nickname "The Iron Lady"). Rudolf, on the other hand, was an excellent electrician, good provider for his family, insanely jealous (even though he never had any reason to be), tender hearted toward those in need, and strong in faith. Rudolf was very much aware that Mary's faith was much stronger, and he always said he wanted to hold onto Mary's skirt so they can go to heaven together
